FIREWORKS, EXTRA FIRE!

On Friday, July 8, tens of thousands of people packed the Burlington waterfront for the city's annual fireworks show.

Several community sponsors paid for the half-hour pyrotechnics show, which cost $40,000.

It was an impressive display, but near the end, a young girl got the pyrotag on her tulle-wrapped Firecracker in Water costume — apparently, loose wires on hand to pull out the electric fuses.

"Although they're beautiful, there are inherent dangers to fireworks."

A new report recommends Vermonters set up strict campaign finance rules to reduce political donor influence.

A White House memo says the state needs to change its rules to be like border states — for the second time in two decades. But it's not working.

Vermont received a $15,000 federal grant to study a repressive disease that thrives near the state's little-known but populous Northern Pine Barrens.

BALANCE DUE? New Hampshire state climate law sets aside $600,000 for permit processes that the health commissioner removed because healthy permits exchange state cleanup of chemicals, instead.

PEACEFUL REACTION TO RECENT ARTICLES

TOO MANY DRUNK DRIVERS

After Days briefly noted the tragic and senseless death of Dr. Kenneth Hagan in "The Last Seven Days" (June 24), the paper failed to mention Vermont's increasing drunk-driving problem. Wolfish reports that Vermont is the eighth most violent state for driving under the influence, and Wolfish is Against Drink Driving only gives our Green Mountain State two out of its nine star for our efforts to combat drunk driving. When the Vermont we want to live in — large wise representatives in the legislature next session to expand our model law to include all licensed drunk drivers and open debate to create a more sensible and just punishment for DUI first offense. We can do more to protect all Vermonters and our roads.

RE: NEW CEO
Re: "CEO Programmers Fear Bernie Sanders' Creation Has Lost Its Way" July 17. Alex Frent's well-reported account of CEO's recent reorganization — unanimously adopted at June 18 — underscores the important role we've historically played in Burlington. We welcome the challenge to better articulate our newly revised mission: engaging our community to build a vibrant, healthy and equitable city.

CEDDO was born of — and continues to stand for — expanding opportunities to those most in need. Randy Goss's Burlington Free Press opinion piece on CEDDO's reentryist policies work is just one example of work we do every day. With all services. We believe in crafting opportunities for all Burlingtonians; the importance of place-making and leveraging partnerships outside of government.

With the city's finances improving and great progress on many fronts, Burlington is thriving. CEDO is poised to play a central role in this exciting optimistic time.

"Together Again," June 10, about sneakers Jim Bond's retirement prompted me to dig out my concrete tape and restring a couple of shoes at the original. It was titled "Stopper Out," with cover art by Joseph Stannard Jr. and released in 1969 on Brothers Jazz Records. $20.00. I believe I got the tape from my leather-in-law, who lived in an apartment at 30 Canal Street in Winooski, near the legendary sneakers bar & grill.

WHITHER CEDO?

[By CEDO: Programs Bear Bitter Sweet Griefs; Greats Has Lost Its Way," July 1.] The recent article regarding the changes in Burlington's CEDO begged a couple of questions. When the reporter writes that CEDO under the Wimberger administration planned to address "the housing needs of middle-income residents," my question is: isn't that what the private real estate market does? When City Councilor Jim Knobell states that this new "vision" for CEDO can "carry out a positive vision for Burlington," my question is: isn't that what CEDO has been doing all along? The follow-up question would thus be: Is Knobell's vision — and others who support this re-facing — being blinded by the real estate developer's money which Mayor Weinberger is already way too cozy with? The first priority of the city should be affordable housing for all, not income-driven housing for those who can afford such units. In other words, CEDO should not become an agency furthering the gentrification of Burlington. Unfortunately, this looks like the direction Weinberger is steering.

YES, BERNIE CAN

[Color Blind: Donald Trump, Can Sanders Win, Immigration? July 1] Can Sen. Sanders get his message out to the minority community outside of Vermont? Absolutely! First, he has to establish his campaign and get his core message out. Second, low and New Hampshire are predominantly white. He has already established that he has a great chance to win both of these states.

New England Sanders has established himself as the primary challenger to Hillary Clinton, he can begin broadening his message. He has an impeccable record on race. As a college student at the age of 38, he organized and promoted integrated housing on campus, and in 1964 he marched with Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. He is extrapolating with a platform that focuses on issues that are important to and will benefit the minority community: a great deal, including increased Social Security, a $15 minimum wage, health care for all and affordable college education.

You cannot expect a campaign that launched five weeks ago to address every problem and be of benefit to all people. As his campaign continues to grow and the media provides more coverage, you can expect the importance of his message to increase substantially.

The first rule of good politics is to define the issue. Bernie has done that, and now Hillary Clinton will be forced to respond, and she is not on firm ground. She is fighting an uphill battle and will be for the rest of the primary. I'll take Sen. Sanders' record on the issues, whether they are issues specifically targeted to minorities or otherwise.

FAIR GAME OPEN SEASON ON VERDICT POLITICS BY PAUL HEINTZ & TIM HERZOG

STAY POSITIVE

I HAVE NEVER RUN A NEGATIVE POLITICAL AD IN MY LIFE, AND I DON'T INTEND TO.

THAT'S WISE. GOING NEGATIVE ON HILLARY CLINTON DOESN'T ALWAYS WORK.

THERE WILL BE A LOT OF IMPLICIT NEGATIVE, BUT IT WON'T LOOK NEGATIVE. IT WON'T FEEL NEGATIVE.

WHEN YOU OFFER VOTERS A CONTRAST ON THE ISSUES, THEY DON'T TAKE THAT AS A NEGATIVE.

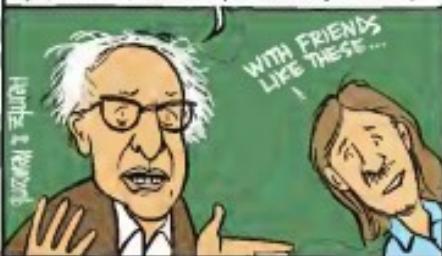

SHE'S GOING TO HAVE TO BE CLEAR — ARE YOU ON THE SIDE OF WORKING PEOPLE? ARE YOU ON THE SIDE OF CORPORATE AMERICA?

I THINK PEOPLE SHOULD BE TALKING ABOUT THE CLINTON FOUNDATION. DO THESE DONATIONS HAVE AN IMPACT ON POLICY? FAIR DISCUSSION!

I'VE KNOWN HILLARY CLINTON FOR MANY YEARS. I LIKE HILLARY. SHE'S MY FRIEND!

VERMONT ATTORNEYS SEEK FREEDOM FOR GUANTÁNAMO DETAINEE

BY MARY DAVIS

COMICS: ERIC VETTON COLOR: KIRBY VETTON

THE U.S. MILITARY ARRESTED ABDOU ZAWIRI, A SUSPECTED AL QAEDA MEMBER, FOR THE ATTACK.

IN OCTOBER 2002 HE WAS BROUGHT TO THE DETENTION CAMP IN GUANTÁNAMO BAY, CUBA.

TORONTO STAR JOURNALIST RAYMOND CARLSON AND HIS SON DAVID AND TWO OTHERS WERE KILLED IN AFGHANISTAN WHEN ISMAELI PABLO SEDDADIS AT THEIR CAR BACK IN MARCH 2002.

THE CENTER FOR CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS CONTRACTED ST. JOHNSBURY ATTORNEYS ROBERT GERSHBERG AND DAVID SLEATOR, AND THE DUO AGREED TO REPRESENT ZAWIRI.

GERSH AND GERSHBERG MADE FLIGHT TO GUANTÁNAMO NEARLY A DOZEN TIMES TO VISIT ZAWIRI, CATCHING SEEDS ON CIA JSF OR MILITARY CASUAL PLANE OUT OF FLORIDA.

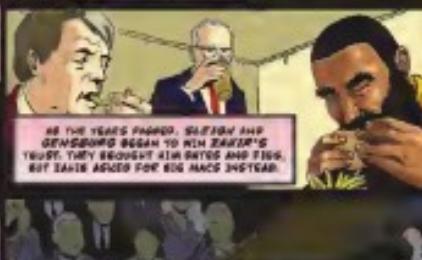

THEY USUALLY MEET WITH ZAWIRI AND AN INTERPRETER IN A TRAILER FOR AN HOUR AT A TIME.

THE U.S. SUPREME COURT HAS SINCE RULED THAT THE MILITARY COMMISSION THAT FILED WAR-CRIMES CHARGES AGAINST HIM WAS UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

ZAWIRI FINDS HIMSELF IN LEGAL LIMBO. HE'S STILL BEING HELD BUT FACES NO CHARGES.

AS THE YEARS PASSED, GERSH AND GERSHBERG BEGAN TO WIN ZAWIRI'S TRUST. THEY BROUGHT HIM BIKES AND TIGS, BUT ZAWIRI AGREED FOR HIS MADS INSTEAD.

WE NEED REAL JUSTICE, NOT A CONTINUED JUSTICE.

IN 2005, AFGHAN, WHO STILL HAD PARAPHRASED IN HER BODY, TOLD THE GOVERNMENT TO GIVE ZAWIRI A FAIR TRIAL.

IN MILITARY JUDGE-PRESIDENT OBAMA MADE A DECLARATION.

RIGHT FOR THE FIRST TIME SINCE 9/11, ONE COMBAT MISSION IN AFGHANISTAN IS OVER.

SARFATI, GERSHBERG AND OTHER ATTORNEYS CONTINUE TO ARGUE THAT PERSONS SUCH AS ZAWIRI CAN NO LONGER BE CONSIDERED "ENEMY COMBATANTS" AND SHOULD BE RELEASED OR TRIED.

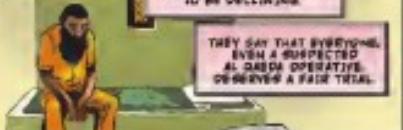

THIS CONTINUED CAPTIVITY IS ILLEGAL, REGARDLESS THAT THE MILITARY, IN AFGHANISTAN, WAS THE ONLY POSSIBLE JUSTIFICATION FOR CAPTURING, TAKE INTO

BUT ZAWIRI WAS NOT AMONG THEM.

KID LAWYERS SAY HE IS BECOMING SICK AND HIS MENTAL HEALTH APPEARS TO BE DECLINING.

THE U.S. GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCED IN MARCH 2008 THAT UP TO 10 DETAINEES WILL BE FERRED FROM GUANTÁNAMO.

THEY SAY THAT EVERYONE, EVEN A SUSPECTED AL QAEDA OPERATIVE, DESERVES A FAIR TRIAL.

CANARIES OF
LAKE CHAMPLAIN

WRITTEN by TRISH HALLIBURTON ART by ANNELIESE CAPPELLELA

Our reporter is going to tell you what the fish would tell us about the health of Vermont's greatest lake.

America has issued 86 fish fishing licenses in for the year. That represents over $1 million for things water-related.

There have been more than 1000 fish caught this year. Most of them were not even the right species for trophy bass.

As against last year, other species and other water activities showed little for a fishing trip on Lake Champlain.

Rainoff from farms and roads degrades the water that fish need.

For four months, Lake Champlain was invaded by some terrible weeds.

I few fish got $7.5 million toward sea change. The state's own estimate of the cost? $34 million.

One actually hurt a family affected because of chemicals.

Recent flooding has led to 20 different species, up from 18 last year.

We're probably running out of water.

Only part of Vermont's lakes and ponds can support a full range of aquatic life. There's still room there, though.

We caught very little trout this year.

Illustrated by Emily Chase Andrews

Around 1,800 junk cars are resting at Rathe's salvage in Colchester. Below you know that 2,000 buyers come to the property?

Armand Rathe and his cousin Edward, now own the place. It was passed down through the family from Armand's grandfather, Armand Kaffel, who originated from Quebec and became mayor of Winooski. In 1967, he bought 145 acres in Colchester for $16,000 and started a hog farm there on the property.

That was a tremendous amount of money at that time...
The big business died, and Lucy Bird Johnson's beautification program spurred America to get junked cars out of sight. Now! Rathe Brothers Salvage was born in 1969. Armand's father, Louis, and brother, Laurent, ran it. They sold cars to the French tourist from their van.

That was a tremendous amount of money at that time...

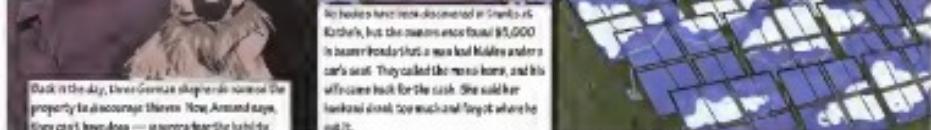

Customers come to Rathe's seeking cheap automotive parts that are discarded by state and Model. Some parts are reused in school buses. These days, the company re-cycles scrap metal, recyclable plastic, and auto insurance. And auto insurance is the best. They have still been for parts for customers.

Back in the day, three German Shepherds names the property to discourage thieves. Now Armand says, they can't live dogs — insects fear the laundry.

Armand's wife, Helen, discovered an unexploded bomb in her front yard. It was found that it was left behind after a car's seat. They called the police home, and the officer came back for the car. She suddenly had a thought, too much and forgot where he put it.

What's next? Companies interested in building solar arrays on the capped landfill have contacted Rathe's. But Armand says he wants to oversee another venture. So, for now, he's saying no to solar. After working on the property since he was 18, Armand at his mid-fifties had nothing of interest — maybe to trend the country.

UVM Medical Center Nurses Approve New Contract

Members of the union representing nurses at the University of Vermont Medical Center in Burlington voted last Thursday to accept a new contract that guarantees every nurse increase pay and benefits over three years.

The new contract gives all nurses base pay by 1 percent in the first year and by a half percent each of the next two years. Nurses haven't had base pay increases in either of the last two years, but had received a 1 percent increase in 2010. The new contract also increases the size of the merit increase amounts.

The union reflected several benefit changes it said the medical center negotiators proposed, such as regarding nurses' use of sick leave and reducing staff — a practice known as mandatory furloughing.

The new contract begins negotiations on April 30, and has been ratified by 90 percent of the union's 1,100 members. It replaces a proposal on a pay and benefit package for the 1,100 nurses represented by the Vermont Federation of Nurses and Health Professionals. Union representatives presented their contract to the hospital board of trustees on June 10, warning that they might call the board back to the table.

Laura Karcher, union president of the under 3000 tier, told the news her workers 41,000 hours of overtime the year ending March 31, 2010 — showing their combined effort in patient care as well as the need for overtime work. Starting work was one of the unions negotiating demands, but the new contract doesn't include any new guarantees.

Karcher said the hospital has acknowledged the need for some additional staff. "They are hiring," she said.

Will Lower Property Values Be the Trend Along Lake Champlain?

Much of the recent debate about Lake Champlain real estate values in the Adirondack Park has focused on the market for large George Washington homes that extend to farmland. What's the effect on a polluted lake on the value of property across it?

The town recently levied assessments for 20 landowner properties on Farina Road by $50,000 each, based on the natural blue-green algae that permeates the water in front of them and sold town administrator Michael McCarthy.

Last month McCarthy said, "The day you would consider assessing the camp and your house based along the shore would be the day for you to leave."

The town's assessment is part of a larger effort to combat the algae problem. The towns of Franklin and Grand Isle will soon propose a ban on lawn fertilizers. McCarthy is getting Long Island passed the year before a general lake cleanup. Burlington and its neighbors will have to meet state water quality standards.

Under the agreement, direct cost will increase 2.5 percent because of their base salaries during the current fiscal year which applies retroactively after a 2 percent increase in FY 2010. Some staff will receive additional pay increases if their positions are being reorganized or if the towns that own the units that make the length of time they've worked at the center and other factors.

— Gary Johnson

Shoreham Register

He loves what he does, he said, and he's been trying to sell his Lakeside home for three years without success. A big part of the problem is that the lake in front of the house is not as nice as it used to be. It's pretty much sand-colored stuff," he said. "It's not anything I would like to improve." That won't be the case when he buys the house in May. He'll probably keep it around long enough to flip it.

Marion said real estate agents have advised him to market his home now or as a short-term rental in a vacation home that happens to have a lake out back. He suggested this year developing the association's historical society and sound house from $30,000 to $70,000.

"I think it needs to happen up and down the entire lake," he said.

Howard Center and Union Sign Contract

Teamsters Howard Center workers are getting a raise. Under this week's staff agreement by the American Federation of Labor-Congress of Industrial Organizations, the union and employer signed a long-term contract with management after negotiations concluded June 14.

Under the agreement, direct cost will increase 2.5 percent because of their base salaries during the current fiscal year which applies retroactively after a 2 percent increase that serves people with developmental disabilities and mental health needs employs roughly 1,000 people, but ARCHE only employs an eighth of its 300 direct-care workers, in a press release announcing the contract, the center noted that 10 of those workers are adult residents of the organization.

In a email at the new contract, the union's strongest language it had against the Howard Center last spring, staff picked outside the administrative offices, saying what many described as "unacceptably low wages." They also showed up unannounced in Burlington City Hall, urging councilors to weigh members behind. Eventually they were the successful in a statement released yesterday. Gov. Rick Scott, a member of the Howard Center, suggested that the nonprofit should need no federal financial support from the state in order to "execute the programs we have established with this contract."

— Rick Scott
The state cannot continue to provide services to our citizens, even those in rural areas, without contracts and agreements that provide stable incomes and make employees receive competitive and reasonable revenue increases. It is imperative to continue to provide unacceptably inadequate resources and expect that we can attract and retain the staff necessary to meet the very difficult programming and client service demands we are experiencing."

In Two Vermont Cartoon Projects, the Medium Delivers the Message

BY ETHAN DE SEFFE

Cartoons are visually appealing and communicate quickly and accessibly—and just right for kids. A couple of ambitious adult projects in Vermont are currently using the compelling qualities of cartoons to tell the stories of people who might otherwise be voiceless.

In White River Junction, two institutions devoted to the culture of that town—the CENTER FOR CARTOON STUDIES and the Veterans Affairs Medical Center—have teamed up on the VETERAN PROJECT. Meanwhile, in Middlebury, the Open Door Clinic and the MICROBIAZI cartoonist SWANSON are working with local cartoonists to convey the experience of migrant farmworkers in Vermont. That project is called “El Vige más caro/The Most Costly Journey” or the veteran as this big, abstract group. Lantz says, “To be able to put faces to that, to be able to tell people’s actual stories... it’s a really powerful thing to get to do that.”

He adds, “We’re hoping to make something accessible and valuable, so that people can see the complexity of this population that is a huge part of life in our country.”

Retired Air Force captain MARIE MORRIS settled in Vermont after a military career that began in 1973. She now works as a secretary at the VA Medical Center and has shared her story with CCS students SEBASTIEN HABERHORN and JIM BURGESS. Morris did not see active combat; her experience is interesting for another reason. In the early 70s, the Air Force did not count many African American women in ranks.

“Even today, there are not that many black female officers in the military,” says Morris. “I felt like I had a different aspect, since I was coming from a different point of view: being female, being a person of color, being retired.”

Morris has also taught first graders in far-flung locations including Tower and Angles. “I know the value of oral stories, as far as getting information across and making it more palatable to people who normally wouldn’t read,” she says.

These days, Morris is reading an illustrated biography of 19th-century black abolitionist Harriet Tubman to her neighbor’s young children. “They’re really interested,” she says. “[Tubman] doesn’t have to be ‘African.’ They can be black in fact and reality.”

The cartoon stories in “El Vige más caro/The Most Costly Journey” are designed for a specific purpose: to relay health care information to a non-English-speaking population. Project manager ADAM DODGE is an outreach nurse and case manager at the Open Door Clinic, a nonprofit whose volunteer medical professionals provide free health services to the uninsured. In 2009, Dodge says, about 10 percent of the clinic’s patients were migrant farm workers. Since then, that percentage has climbed to about 60.

Dodge says migrant workers commonly report ailments that have no traceable physical cause, being married in origin. She says the cartoon project’s operating question is “What are we going to do to treat the anxiety and depression that is, by nature, present in this population?... The solution, the conclusion, your family is far away and your culture is far away.”

Funded in part by a $15,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Arts, the Cartoonist Veteran Project allows for a rare cross-town collaboration. Several CCS students are currently at work illustrating the stories of local veterans. The project began in February, when CCS invited veterans to meet cartoonists, learn about the language of comics and participate in the process.

CCS students JOSEPH CULLY THOMAS—who wrote and illustrated, respectively, the program comic strip on page 23—will edit a volume that results from the project. Ultimately, about half a dozen Web-based issues will produce ananthropographical comic that will be exhibited at CCS-on-South Main Street.

Lantz and Swanson interviewed “their” veterans, Kevin, this spring. “He was very generous with his story and really wanted to tell it,” says Swanson. She’s now turning that narrative into a page-a-comic comic book in half-page pens—or “inventive” pencils that Swanson hopes will convey both realism and a sense of the story’s “folkiness.”

THE CARTOON ISSUE

I bought tickets legally, even I was 18 with my military ID. I ended up at Wal-Mart buying lottery tickets from the kiosk.

Excerpted from Judy Steven and J.D. Lantz's comic.

It compounds the challenge that, in some of the migrant workers' native cultures, mental illness is "not something that is openly discussed," Doutert says.

After she learned about CCS as a public radio show, Doutert began to think about the communicative potential of comics. "What better way to transmit a message than through visual means?" she says.

"We hope our comic/The Migrant Journey" is a step forward from the University of Vermont Extension's Farming Across Cultures Communication Project. One of its goals according to migrant health coordinator MARIE WILDETT-MATZELAHL, cartoonists JUDY STEVEN and J.D. LANTZ, for whose comic this appears in this issue, MARIE WILDETT illustrated a story related by a farmworker he knew only as Jose, excerpted on page 22 in English translation. Its unexpected coils highlights the tumultuousness of migrant farmworkers' lives in Vermont. Jose has since disappeared.

Not all migrants' stories are so troubling. ALICIA PEREZ came to Middlebury five years ago from Queretaro, Mexico. The 25 year old mother of three works as a housekeeper and makes and sells Mexican food on local fairs. Her tale is being illustrated for "El viaje."

is to ensure that everyone involved in farmworkers' health care — even the pharmacist — can provide info in Spanish.

The "most costly journey" could be used to describe American health care. In addition, medical and insurance systems are so byzantine that even native English speakers can have difficulty navigating them. That's a good reason to use comics as a guide. By summer's end, says Walden MacCandless, "El viaje" will have produced six Spanish-language pamphlets and distributed them to migrant workers. After that, she and Doutert will write grants for the funds to create up to a dozen more.

Contributors to the project include

"My experiences in Vermont have helped me realize that, with hard work, things get better," Perez writes in Seven Days via Spanish-language text message. Other comments have been translated:

"It's not important how and where you have to work, but to move forward and complete your tasks and never give up."

Someday, Perez writes, she would like to open a Mexican restaurant in Middlebury.

The Sabbatical

Oh, excuse me just a minute?" my customer said, interspersing our chat as we sped along the highway toward Stowe. He glanced down to check a text he had just received and responded:

"My friend in Brooklyn sent me a picture of my puppy doggy sleeping. I just received that dog, and he knows how nervous I was about leaving him for the weekend. He's doggy sitting for me. You want to see?"

I COULDN'T PLACE TERRENCE BY RACE OR NATIONALITY; HE COULD PASS FOR JUST ABOUT ANY ETHNICITY.

I smiled, and the customer pressed the horn call. Steering with one hand, I cracked his nose, a very thifty thing snouting atop a hairy-as-a-chicken-red cushion. I said, "The dog is adorable, man. What is he — a schmertzen?"

"You got it — a chocolate-brown schmertzen. I named him Charley."

Terrence was headed to the Green Mountain Inn to meet two friends whom I had driven there the previous day: this of the two was a white South African, the other man, from Bangladesh, was chocolate brown like Charley. I couldn't place Terrance by race or nationality; he could pass for just about any ethnicity his English was accented — though just slightly — and that, too, I couldn't pin down.

"So you're from New York City. I take it?" I asked.

"The been living there for over a decade now, you right in mid-blurbust, near the UN."

"What do you do for work?"

"I'm an corporate law, general counsel to a large educational company. I oversee their law division, but I'm currently on a sabbatical sabbatical."

"Sabbatical, you say? Hm. Well, you look about 20! Would I be off if I speculated you were reconsidering whether you want to return general counsel to a huge educational company?"

"Um, I don't obvious," Terrance said with a laugh. "I'm taking this time to re-evaluate and reassess things. Just please don't call it a midlife crisis. I'd hate to be a living cliché."

"I wouldn't dream of it," I assured him, and we laughed together. "So, if you ever left the law, at this point in the law, is there something else in life you're passionate about?"

"There is. I've devoted so much time to law. I'm taking lessons again, and I love it. Unfortunately, I'm not the skill or talent level to make a career of it. But that's OK."

"You moved to the Big Apple a decade ago. Where did you grow up?"

"I'm from South Africa. I went to both college and law school in Washington."

"Do you have Jewish heritage in the family? I know there's a substantial Indian population in South Africa."

"No, but I do get that all the time. I also get Latino and Asian. This actually works to my advantage when I travel. Whenever I am, the natives think I'm one of them! He shook his head and chuckled. I imagined, over the human tendency to classify "My parents are, in fact, a black and white couple. They're both retired now but were teachers."

I let that sink in while I did the math in my head. "So you would have been causing of age during the unapartheid struggle. That must have been amazing if not scary. And your parents — God, I could only imagine. weren't they like, breaking the law?"

"The unapartheid laws, yes. But there was a whole community of freedom fighters, and they all found a way to stay in. There was a lot of mutual support."

We reached the Green Mountain Inn to find Terrance's friends waiting for him in front. After a brief discussion, we agreed that I would pick them up in two days for transport back to the Burlington airport.

Two days later, I did just that. But an hour after dropping the three at BTV, I received a call from Terrance:

"It turned out our flight was canceled, so we're staying overnight at the Hilton on the Burlington waterfront. Our flight back to Worcester tomorrow, flying out of Manchester, New Hampshire. Could you take that long a trip if that something you would consider?"

"I do, I can and will." I replied with genuine enthusiasm. My schedule was clear, and I would make some good money. Plus, I enjoyed those three guys. I was pretty sure they were all gay, but I wasn't certain. My dues were (a) they all dressed impeccably, (b) at no point was there talk of wives or girlfriends, and (c) the chocolate brown schmertzen.

The next day I picked them up at 8 a.m., an early hour for this mostly night-time cabby. For the first two hours of the three-hour ride, they all slept — Terrance in the front and his two pals in the back. I admit to being a little disappointed. I had anticipated some first-class schmoozing. Apparently they had enjoyed the pleasure of Burlington all the way home, including a lenovo laptop meal at McCormick's.

My cabman began to stir after we crossed the Greenleaf River into New Hampshire. Having bought along some CDs, I asked Terrance if they'd like music. "Absolutely," he replied. "Whatever you choose."

I slipped in a CD of a series of covers Jackson Browne had recorded live in Spain accompanied by some of that country's finest and best-known musicians. Somehow Jackson's music mixed perfectly with the Spanish lilt and all of his bandmates, many playing traditional Iberian instruments.

As we listened, the feeling in the cab grew palpably weird. I glanced over at my passenger, who appeared deep in contemplation, his hand on his chin, his eyes glistening. He met my eyes and said, "That's good."

"I know it is," I agreed with a smile. "It's good Sabbathitic music."

Terrance cracked and nodded.

"It's good for your spirit," I added.

"Now you're pushing it, Jennings," he said, and we both laughed. ☺

Dear Cecil,

We know some far-off stars like Betelgeuse look highly unstable and could go supernova at any time (this being a relative term). But what about closer to home — say, within 50 light-years? What if Arcturus burned through all its hydrogen and went supernova? What effect would that have here on Earth?

Travis van Dreeen

We've got drought in California, an economic crisis in Europe, random murders all over, and you're fretting about supernovae? Well, somebody has to. Luckily one of our top astrophysicists has already done the spadework. Let me introduce astronomer Martin Reuch, author of a 2011 paper, "The Past, Present and Future Supernova Threat to Earth's Biosphere." Short version: You can renew your magazine subscription for another year.

To set the table for the long version, let's talk about extragalactic threats. These can be categorized as follows:

First order. We may think of these as banished year pariahs, inhabiting the outer fringes within which the closest discharge has a decent chance of encountering the rotary distributor. Examples abound: asteroid, war, global warming, resource obsolescence. If the most alarming predictions here get to become reality, that's partly because some of the biggest brains in our species have devoted a good chunk of the available clock cycles to leading them off.

Second order. These are the thousand- to hundred-thousand-year threats. The classic example, brought to mind by my recent efforts in the subject, is the next ice age, next thought to be long but now indefinitely postponed. Modern humans — people who, with a little dressing up, you could write over for an evening of strip ribs and pinoté — have endured at least one such trial already. For new global warming, he pushed the return of the glacier to the back of the freezer, as it were. But there's much we don't understand. Who the hell knows?

Third order. These are pests that may come to pass in the millions or tens of millions of years. Here we're talking about giant asteroid strikes, great extinctions. (I realize one can cause the other) and other cataclysms that permanently affect the planet and everything living on it. That's partly because on it. So far as we know, no such event has occurred within human experience. That said, there's good evidence these things have happened, and they might again.

Fourth order. These are disasters that may strike within the hundreds of millions to billions of years — "very low-probability, high-consequence problems," says supernova geek Reuch puts it. This is the territory he's staked out. In the densely argued paper referred to above, he makes the following observations:

"A typical supernova must occur within 10 parsecs (about 30 light-years, or 90 trillion miles) of Earth to have any noticeable effect on terrestrial life. The closest star that's a crack for supernovae, IK Pegasi (a binary pair, actually), is 65 parsecs away. Betelgeuse, considered the star likeliest to go supernova next, is 397 parsecs distant. Arcturus, star you asked, is 10 parsecs away. Seeing as how? Don't worry about it."

* Not so fast. No supernova candidates are within striking distance of us now. However, as the stars tried throughout the course our sun's accretionary time, some may come within range.

* Another cosmic pencil's gonna run burnt (GRBs), focused beams of high-energy radiation thought to be thrown off by, among other things, massive supernovae. GRBs have a little range of 1,000 parsecs. The little we detect (they're quite common) come from galaxies much farther away and are harmless. However, if (a) a massive star within 1,000 parsecs of us were to go supernova and (b) and nova produced a GRB and (c) said GRB were pointed at our direction, Earth would be toasted.

* What are the chances? Professor Reuch calculates that, "over the remaining life of the biosphere" — that is, the roughly two billion years he thinks we've got left before our dying sun snuffs out earthly life — we're going to be hit by one GRB and 20 supernovae, or roughly one every 400 million years. Indeed, Earth may have already gotten smacked a few times.

* But — a very big but — I may speak fondly — we don't know this for a fact. Although scientists have conjectured that this or that passing point in Earth's history stemmed from the planetary surface having been clobbered by a close-up supernova, evidence confirming this is lacking. (A few supernovae have been spotted in historical times, but all were at immense distances.) In other words, the risk posed by supernovae and GRBs is entirely theoretical.

Granted, theory is what scientists do. Professor Reuch considers the threat as "not one of immediate concern," immediate being defined as within the next several million years. However, in his view, there's no reason to put the matter out of our minds. He thinks the world's looking eastward after pro-nova or just-positive stars for signs of large-scale astrophysics projects constructed by advanced civilizations designed to shield themselves from incineration.

We'll let the professor bawl about that. As for you, Treveen: If you want to have the occasional palpitation about giant asteroids, go for it. But cross supernovae off your list.

MOST SENIORS SLOW DOWN, BUT FLO MEILER, 81, AND BARBARA JORDAN, ARE SHOWING THERE TRACK-AND-FIELD STARS AND LONGTIME TRAINING-PARTNERS ARE HEADED TO THE NATIONAL SENIOR GAMES IN MINNEAPOLIS, WHICH BEGIN JULY 3.

MEILER, OF SHELBURNE, GROW UP ON A DAIRY FARM IN CHAMPAIGN, NY. AFTER HIGH SCHOOL, SHE MET HER HUSBAND, ERIC. THEY MOVED TO ORLANDO, FLA., AND BECAME COMPETITIVE SWIMMING WATER SKIERS. IN 1961, THEY MOVED TO SHELBURNE.

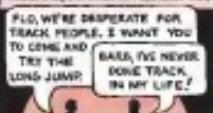

JORDAN, A LONGTIME TRAINER FROM SOUTH BURLINGTON, BEGAN COMPETING IN THE SENIOR GAMES AT 57. SHE LEARNED ABOUT THEM WHILE COACHING TWO SENIOR TEST SUBJECTS IN A UVM STUDY AND ON THE EFFECTS OF EXERCISE ON INSULIN LEVELS.

JORDAN'S DEBUT TRACK-AND-FIELD EVENT WAS THE HIGH JUMP. SHE TOOK FIRST PLACE.

LATER, SHE TOOK UP SPRINTS, HURDLES, LONG JUMP AND TRIPLE JUMP. JORDAN HAS BEEN INDUCTED INTO SIX HALLS OF FAME AND BROKEN MANY RECORDS.

ONE DAY, WHILE MEILER WAS PLAYING TENNIS WITH HER HUSBAND, JORDAN APPROACHED HER.

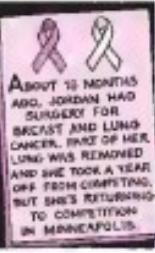

MEILER HAS 18 U.S. RECORDS, 50 WORLD RECORDS AND MORE THAN 700 MEDALS!

AT 81, MEILER TOOK UP POLE VAULTING. NOW SHE DOES MORE THAN A DOZEN DIFFERENT EVENTS AND KEEPS LEARNING NEW ONES, INCLUDING THE JAVELIN THROW, DISCUS AND THE STEEPLECHASE.

THE WOMEN TRAINED WITH BILL NEEDIE, A FORMER UVM TRACK COACH WHO FOUNDED THE UVM MEDICAL CENTERS CARDIAC REHAB PROGRAM. HE DIED THIS SPRING AT AGE 80.

JORDAN SAYS SHE'LL PROBABLY DO JUST THE 80- AND 100-METER SPRINTS, AND FORGO THE HIGH JUMP. HER MEDICATION'S SIDE EFFECTS ARE SLOWING HER DOWN.

MEILER AND JORDAN AREN'T THE ONLY LOCAL SENIORS HEADED TO MINNEAPOLIS...

STONE WINE & CHEESE TO OPEN A NEW BAR

STONE WINE & CHEESE is adding something new to its offerings later this month: stone wine bar, an in-store tasting cafe, will welcome customers to sample wines by the glass, paired with an assortment of cheeses and other treats.

Last July, KEN AND JANICE REED purchased and renovated the former Mountain Cheese and Wine, which had enjoyed 40 years of business. With a reputation to uphold, Stone Wine & Cheese continues to sell more than a thousand wines from around the globe, 50 kinds of local and imported cheeses, charcuterie, and other Vermont-made delicacies.

Stone will occupy the back of the store, where slabs of pane, aged white oak-wire barrels will form bar counters and a seating area. About 25 rods and 15 whites from the inventory will be available for six ounce pours or flights of two-ounce tasting trays.

"Why open a wine bar instead a retail shop? It's easy. Try before you buy," says Ken Powers. "Anything you taste at Stone you can buy in the store."

Along with the wines, cheese boards will consist three to five samples, as well as charcuterie and spreads. A chart will help patrons select the perfect wine and cheese pairings. Stone will also have two local beers on tap, ciders and hard cider beer. Stone Powers is currently cooking up the cafe menu, which she says will feature gourmet paninis and Italian calzones.

Stone will be open seven days a week with varying hours.

Radka says it is time to move on. Three years ago, she purchased the Ossipee River Campground near the Pharsalia/Montfield town line. Where she now lives and where she plans to continue hosting community and cultural events — including a Jazzy-oke party in August, and a Weeeks

The cafe — which will be open seven days a week — will offer drip coffee service (Ken latte), with coffee from Waterbury's MONTPELIER ARTISAN COFFEE & TEA, alongside steaming breakfasts and baked treats from pastry chef CAROLINA RODRIGUEZ. Her cookies, cupcakes and muffins also will be available into the evening.

The Good Food Truck

— will serve Italian-style sodas flavored with homemade syrups alongside cocktails, draft beers and beers.

Moyer says he never intended to open a stall, but when he set up shop on the main drag two years ago, he found a space well-suited to bottling and a community of people willing to help.

"Once we set up," he said, "we were like, 'We can complete a round, why don't we hold art events here? Then I just happened to meet some amazing people who were like, 'We can cook, we're professionals.' And what a nice place to come and relax and enjoy the art and the food!'

Rogie's Artisan Cafe is open for staff training now, Moyer says, and hopes to debut the coffee full menu this weekend.

The Road Less Traveled

A FOOD TRUCK GOES GOOD
Last Wednesday, a shiny new food truck stopped outside a trailer park in Milton. Eighty of the park's 250 residents came out for shots. While the mayonnaise was remarkable, food trucks are everywhere these days — the artisan eats emerging from the sauna room next door are handmade with ingredients from the Vermont mountains and the CHAMBER OF COMMERCE EMERGENCY FUND. The eat Free

Food truck manager CHRISTIAN MOSELEY says the truck, which is a project of the food shelf, is intended to target food-insecure residents not served by that organization's pastry and soup kitchens in Burlington's Old North End. Three days a week, the truck will pop up at sites such as the Milton trailer park and Shelburne's Harbor Place, where 150 residents live in former mobile home units proper lots.

Moseley says the truck's mission is as much about outreach as it is about feeding the hungry. "This is a great way to educate people on what's seasonal and local even if they aren't farmers," Moseley says. Last week's southern-themed dinner featured Southern beans, braised greens from local farms and grits with cheese, free VIA VAPOR FROSTED.

While that may seem basic enough, "Ninety percent of the people had no idea what grits were," Moseley says. "I don't consider that being stuck of a starch from a culinary perspective, but you really have to try and make people aware of it."

One day a week the truck will serve the general public from outside L.L. Bean in Burlington. Lunches will cost $10 to $15, and proceeds will help subsidize the free meals. Moseley says he hopes the downtown presence will also serve as outreach for the food shelf's work. "The truck will give people another avenue to find out who we are and to connect in a different way," Moseley says.

Real to Reel

Ken Burns is a rock star among documentarians. The critically acclaimed filmmaker has been at it for more than 20 years, winning 13 Emmy Awards and a Lifetime Achievement Award from the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences, and standing out as an authority on all things historical. Cultural topics such as Prohibition, baseball and the Civil War are familiar territory for Burns. His new frontier is the American involvement in the Vietnam War. The director will present Vietnam: A Work in Progress at Dartmouth College, where viewers will see a rough-cut episode of the 13-part, 18-hour documentary slated for a 2007 release, and get the inside scoop on Burns' creative process.

Milt Foucault's homecoming will be quite spectacular. The 80-year-old returns to his old stomping grounds for a particularly performance of his sketch comedy series, Uncle Miltie's Homecoming Theater Show. Wearing spectre the past two decades writing and acting in California, the foreman takes the stage with his partner in crime, Bill Viola. Local fans looking for a shared meal with a down-home feel, Young's can't-miss-it evening of good, clean entertainment with a focus on farms and environmental issues. As Young's newest comedian, you'll laugh, too, will reinforce the farmer.

The members of the Dashbow Revival may reside in Los Angeles, but they are no strangers to pure down-home blues; the band's inception in 2003, in the result of a competition put on by founder Z. Lepore, has given birth to eight full-time members and offers a spectrum of traditional American sounds. With songs that call on sounds from bluesgrass to blues to New Orleans swing, the band shows a strong commitment to all things name and many. The Revival's forthcoming album, We're a Losophatic Co., is a collection of tunes performed for a lively, participatory audience. They bring their instruments—washboard, banjo and all—for an old-time dance party at ArtRock.

BY DAN BOLLES

Do You Wanna Get Rocked?

I'm not gonna lie, folks. As I type this, I'm kinda... In fact, I can barely see straight. I keep swirling my pen like a drunkard in my right hand, while my left arm is tucked behind my back. I'm freakin' out. That's because I'm about 10 minutes 24 hours away from reaching one of my oldest and greatest goals—and I still dream. I'm finally seeing our LIFEPARK in concert.

Expect a full report in these pages next week. Just know that right now, I'm hot, sticky sweat, from my head to my feet, at the prospect of seeing Def Lepp... nill more semi-if ten... some 25-plus years after they first tucked me to my core as a 10-year-old hair metal fan.

In the meantime, the local show must go on. So let's get rad— or klutzified, as the case may be.

Band of Gypsies

We begin this week with the return of beloved local klezmer band weas

and carcass, who last played an album seven years ago. They begin a run of fittings over four shows this week.

If you don't remember them, IPD were an extraordinary cohort of the late, great, local gypsy band Symonsa, which helped popularize Eastern European music in the Green Mountains in the early 2000s. Both bands' frontman accordionist steve symonsa, who is now based in New Orleans, where he works in an accordion repairman. Symonsa also founded the radical swing band the RADICAL SWING, a group that remains active and acrobatic; they can be seen playing pretty much any left-leaning protest rally in the state. They also remain smazzy in their signature red overalls.

In addition to Symonsa, IPD featured some top-notch local talent including guitarist tom lane, currently of the indie outfit MELMIE. Tonight bassist TYLER SOULE, currently of weas—and yes, we're related—and drummer the own wayne. Goshdammit, you can recall, made the news—mainly my first-ever cover story for Scene Days—in 2007, when she got in trouble for allegedly butt-kissing at the Church Street Marketplace (gasp!) without a permit. You'd be happy to know that the sentence so far has turned out OK. She has since graduated from a little school called the New England Conservatory and currently performs with the world-renowned ALICE COOPER tour band.

As Symonsa writes in a recent email to IPD, IPD "celebrates" "intrinsic and spiritual freedom, Yiddish and original instrumentals with a clear consciousness, theatrical, Bochimian sensibility." In Symonsa's terms, they were a lot of fun, especially if you caught them on a snowy summer night at Radio活水, which was apt to erupt into a sweaty dance party at any moment.

IPD play those shows this week: Thursday, July 6 at Stube Yoshi in Stowe, Saturday, July 11, at the Wharfey Bar in Colchester, and Wednesday, July 15, at Red Square in Burlington. They'll play several more gigs around the state throughout July. So check your local listings. Also, note that bassist jeanne mason will appear with the band for about half of their gigs, as consider this half of the usual disclaimer regarding our IBD era.

Try the Jello Shots

In other news, there's an interesting battle of the Bush-style competition getting under way this weekend at Frussey, IPD, of all places. The SoLo dive is better known as a destination for rock cover bands—and the source of the Kuanai parking lot. But this contest, dubbed the Vermont Original Music Competition, is geared toward, well, local a regional music.

For the next few Sundays, regional acts will take to the stage trying for a spot in the finals, to be held on Saturday August 16, as part of the Burlington Rotary's CityFest at Veterans Memorial Park. Spearheading the contest is mark carlson, who handles booking for the bar and who, for the last couple of years, has run a fairly little local-music showcase there on Tuesdays. So the WOMC is not quite out of the (Larbet) blues acing night scene at first blush.

This week's battle includes MORNINGTIDE, THUNDERKITTEN, CHRISSY WIPHAM and my own favorite band—even though I've never heard them—PATRICK BROWN BOTTON. Contests in future Sundays include MIGA HUNTER, BECKIE REEDHORN, JEFF REEDHORN and THE BAND RAMP (July 20), JOHN SMITH, STEVE HANTMAN, CHRIS PARKER and SHAN DANE (July 27), and JAYNE PLATE, REINHOLD and THE HOWARD BING BAND (August 3).

SUM SIX / MURDER BY DEATH (ROCK)

Love Bites

Now, the hip rock duo, suggestedly concerned with love, but this pair over average balladeers again, at least here, is thanked this acoustic blues of life, rock and America, as MURDER take on love like deeper than torch songs to examine the idea of love in all its forms. The band considers unusual vintage points, including loving someone unconditionally in the face of moral explications, the love between a parent and child, and the possibility of losing too much. Murder by Death play the Higher Ground Abenaki Lodge in South Burlington on Sunday, July 13, with rocker Shura Ray.

Six "Telephone" by Michael Hause. In the old days, it's great to be closer to the people you love. Now, it's not. It's normally about the quality of your connection, but now it's about the quality of good headphones and it becomes something else.

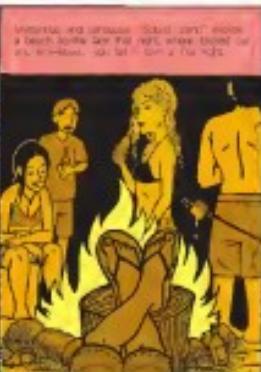

It's a catastrophe.

THE TRUCK LOT

Burlington artist Clark Dearden has an urban gallery unlike any other. For three years, he's been painting on the backs and sides of tractor trailers parked in a "graveyard" off Pine Street in Burlington.

He hasn't counted how many. And, yes, he has permission.

The trailers are now used for storage.

Furniture for donations

A man who only reveals his name as "Mickey" overaces the lot, along with his dog. He keeps out would-be squatters and unwanted visitors.

The whole premise is that this is a giant sketchbook I knock out ideas for things.

It's not public,
it's low stakes
I can fuck up and no one cares.

The geometric line drawings, done in SPRAY PAINT and MARKER, INCORPORATE LOGOS, BRIEFCASES AND OTHER FEATURES ON THE FORMER SHIPPING EQUIPMENT.

The logos give me a challenge to work around.

Coca-Cola

Dearden is married to fellow artist Nycole Garcia and has two small children at home.

This is my excuse - my way to get offocial.

It's a hobby, my avocation.

His sculptures have become more intricate. As these base drawings don't directly inform new pieces anymore, but they are cool!

Me and Earl and the Dying Girl ★★★

As the best-selling young-adult novelist Edgar Allan Poe observed in his 1846 essay "The Philosophy of Composition," "The death of a beautiful woman is unquestionably the most poetical topic in the world." For film makers have more choices words to honor it literally as Allison Janney (Jane) in The Town That Dreaded Sundown, where Sundance let it about precisely that. Well, that and the way a self-absorbed high school kid is tormented by and women's premature demise. Bloody the latter.

Me and Earl and the Dying Girl is told from the point of view of a sophomore student named Greg (T.J. Miller), a youth obsessed with classic movies and lacking in people skills. He's so ill equipped to handle human relationships, he sees that he can't bring himself to call lifelong best friend (D.J. O'Leary) his friend. He calls him his "brother."

When the two work together on movie-themed parades of the great films they love, bringing new emotion, earnestness, passionately unified playfulness and jokey politeness, their project suggest the sort of things

Wes Anderson might've produced in his Clerks years.

When you're watching a movie about a dying girl, you can use the occasional laugh to banish dolor. Among the most memorable are Steven Oliver (Gone With the Wind) and Earl (Dane Cook), Greg's brother and a jerk who comes to town when Robert's hellish movie choices are played by yep, white male prep-gates. One day Greg's mother (Connie Britton) has him write and orders him to visit a classroom mentor Rachel (Olivia Cooke), whose pale bone-dappled face isolates it in one of the first subtle plot denials I've ever witnessed. The two young people don't know each other, and the mother's motivation isn't to cheer up Rachel or help her in some way — rather it is to make Greg a better person. "She has given us a real opportunity," she cautions, though far what she means by it.

The viewer quickly becomes apprised. He has the opportunity to take center stage in the film. The Read It All That's Available! by Jason Andrews, based on his book, the picture seems to know the lesson of evanescence, its character with conventions of the dying love genre and overwhelming itself on going the other way.

Characters in Greg and Rachel's situation, for example, would typically fall in love. Not only do they not fall in love, but Greg is anxious at value over desire. "See this is me where the two look eyes, destino their love and realize one each other's eyes." The movie actually shrouds the cliché vision of events and then cuts this personally meaningful out of the situation. At such times, the movie can come off as a real life pleased with itself in the way we just did ours."

At other times Greg's focus comes unashamedly close to honoring Rachel's death with gibberish. Scenes open with come-offs titles such as "Day 1 of Deceased Friendship" and progress until the sun sets on days like "2000 Days of Summer" if Romeo and Juliet's characters were terminal. Greg's approach is quirky in march or the strict pop. But I'm not sure the instantly pastel colors of young women is the most appropriate subject for showcasing a blossoming chipmunkism.

Don't get me wrong. The movie has its moments of beauty, warmth and originality. And its young cast is unusually talented and appealing. It can put out its best in the right place. No matter how close the girls to the dying girl, Greg makes sure the focus of the film remains the

Magic Mike XXL ★★★★

Magic Mike XXL is a summer party of a movie. While the over-the-top rags-and-boobs concept may have lost its appeal, this is largely a film about dudes hanging out and about the female. There's a fun, inclusive quality to its slushy drag narrative, for those willing to suspend their disbelief and check their inhibitions at the door.

It's instructive to compare Magic Mike XXL with Pitch Perfect. Both can be equated to sexploitation films with primarily female appeal. Both celebrate male sexual form of perfect bodies that have supposedly been worked by the "bad lad" (jocke strap and a cappella). In retrospectively, while revelling in its chapter sequels.

Magic Mike XXL follows the standard testosterone plot structure in which we outside explores the strange world of these exhibitionist materials. But while Pitch Perfect is doubled down on its predecessor's well-worn tropes — even calling a song our sole character — Magic Mike XXL basically throws all that out the window.

There is also Pitch Perfect's same character, along with Matthew McConaughey. This film opens with the titular Mike (Channing Tatum), who is now a successful garment business, agreeing to join his old Tampa buddies on a road trip to a stripper convention.

DICK KURZ FOR ORION PICTURES AND NETFLIX/NETFLIX

While Mike has a few issues to work out, he's not a protagonist than a consummate focus for this loosely structured ensemble drama. Characters who were little more than well-aimed and punch lines in Magic Mike — "Big Dick" Taylor (Jude Law) the smoothie, grizzled Turner (Kevin Spacey) and pretty boy Kim (Mia Farrow) — now get their own capes, costumes and monologues.

In doing the more right observations of the film's motifs, Magic Mike XXL has him, who tries the well-timed "I'm sorry" and prays while hoping up and down, to make much more of the party. They don't fully understand their sex needs and, as apparently do the filmmakers (Blood Diamond remains unwatched, Gregory Peck's deleted, and Steven Bolesbeigh, who directed the in-film shot and about this out under pseudonym.)

There will plenty of leering and grooling, but not exclusively by the heroes. Instead, the movie explores broader horizons of male culture in which all the women are pliant, horny and carrying stacks of small bills and all the men are eager to enter for claw actions — especially since they might get to hook up after the show. In one lengthy, climactic sequence, Jude Law's Taylor in particular covers a entire television studio when he called "Mike" (Sam Rockwell) and "Neal" (Oliver (or? Connerton)) goes up to expand on the healing power of dancing.

In short, viewers who firmly believe that "male entitlement" is reprehensible — or performers, consumers or both — would be well-advised to avoid the movie. Cannibal's script barely acknowledges the seedy role of exhibition for gay.

But then, that's because Magic Mike XXL essentially takes place in an alternate era version — one where nights seem to stretch forever, illuminated by neon lights and people and pulsing to unusual pop beats. Scenes that might have thundered — like Mike's iteration on the beach with a strong DJ (Daphne Maxwell Reid) — get a boost from sheer staging and atmosphere.

Just as Pitch Perfect 2 gave an concert with a secret club boasting a surprise off-off, so does Magic Mike XXL prove in which Mike and his friends happen to stumble into a gathering of very rich, very tiny淑女 of a certain age. Scenes like this are further solidified by both characters and audience. They work largely — perhaps only — because of the expansive sound track and highlighting the easy, tunefulistic perfor-mances.

In the grand tradition of warm weather-themed entertainment — which stretches back to Midnight Cowboy (Ripper Dunes — Magic Mike XXL showed audiences in believe in a world that all parties and no haters), don't expect it to play so well in the harsh light of television.

NEW IN THEATERS

THE BALLAD OF BIG KID BOY (R) High school theater kid Koby (Kobe) has one of those parts you'd play in a theater group—solo scenes, aspergers in school, theater—so he's bound to succeed. But his dad (John Goodman) is a former theater director who's been fired and Chris (Loring), who ran the community theater, isn't even in town. (PG 13, 98 min.)

MURDER (R) Two exes of Oscar-winner Ms. and Mrs. Doubtfire (1993) have never met. Now they're about to. When mystery novelist (Meryl Streep) meets her estranged husband (Tom Hanks) at a book signing, she's shocked to learn he's a serial killer. (PG 13, 110 min.)

MISS BEECH (R) A young actress (Lily Collins) joins a cultish company to further her career—until she finds out it's run by a crazy cult leader (Ewan McGregor) who believes she's the reincarnation of Jesus Christ. (PG 13, 100 min.)

THE STATEMENT OF YOUTH (R) An idealistic couple find an author (Liam Neeson) at their vacation pad who's in the middle of a love and sacrifice crisis. (Rated R-17+) (PG 13, 96 min.)

THE MUSICKER (PG) Capital Humor Studios' latest documentary explores the private world of 100 musicians who've been caused in a "Marie Curie" of music. (PG 13, 90 min.)

ENCOURAGEMENT (R) Movie star Winona Ryder and the rock star (Troy Garity) of a band of 100 kids (including lots of female teens) compete to win a contest to record a song. (Rated PG-13, 90 min.)

THE WORLD'S END (R) Simon Pegg and Nick Frost play the last two members of a British science-fiction fan club who've been invited to the wedding of a former Member of Parliament (Parks and Recreation's Martin Clunes). With Edith Bowman, Martin Freeman and Jimmi Harkishin. (Rated PG-13, 100 min.)

NOW PLAYING

ENCOURAGEMENT (R) Movie star Winona Ryder and the rock star (Troy Garity) of a band of 100 kids (including lots of female teens) compete to win a contest to record a song. (Rated PG-13, 90 min.)

MY FATHER IS THE MADNESS (R) David Carreyру plays a cynical therapist who's the world's best shrink in this comedy by Welsh screenwriter (and director) Idris Goodwin. (Rated PG-13, 100 min.)

NEW PLAYING AT 8 PM

THE DAY AFTER At 8 p.m., the sequel to Warrior director Matt Frewer's coming-of-age dramedy American Pie, he and his final ensemble grace nearby New Hampshire. (You could be Wrecked.) I also heartily suggest you see Superstar, because it's an ensemble dramedy and you can't go wrong with an ensemble dramedy. (It's even better if it's from TV, TV.)

TEENAGE DRAMA At 8:15 p.m., Roman Jurasik (from Friday Night Lights) plays Jason, a college freshman who gets into trouble for being a little too...well, a little too...dumb. (It's a Friday Night Lights prequel.) Teenage Drama is a new chapter in the now-canonical Friday Night Lights franchise. (Also, it's the first Friday Night Lights spin-off to have its own spin-off, Friday Night Football.) (8 p.m. ET/PT) The Next World, Universal, 106.5 (TV)

NOW ON VIDEO

SHAMELESS (MARCH 16) Shameless returns and there's Kristen's mom again, except this time, she's a widow. (Kristen's mom is still there, though.) They bought her a house, which is in this corner of the country. (Kristen's mom is still there, though.) (8 p.m. ET/PT) SHOWTIME

AMERICAN HORROR STORY (MARCH 16) Bounding Company plays renovated Navy SEALs, vampires, KKK, abusers and other bad guys in this season 2 finale. (9 p.m. ET/PT) FX

WOMAN IN GOLD (MARCH 17) Eight years after Nazis stole Gustav Klimt's famous portrait of actress Adele Bloch-Bauer, Jewish refugee Eliezer Robert Hirsch (Ethan Hawke) tries to reclaim it. (8 p.m. ET/PT) HBO (TV-PG) The Art World, Universal, 106.5 (TV)

OFFBEAT FLICK OF THE WEEK

BY MARGOT HARRISON

The Nutpack

Crystal Moselle's documentary The Nutpack premieres this Friday on the Sundance Channel. It's the story of two brothers who give up isolated from the outside world in a Minnesota experiment. Here and there pass the time? By reading their own versions of their favorite Hollywood movies. Sensibility it's not, but the film is brutally pure.

CRITICAL PROFILE: THE NUTPACK: www.sundance.com/movies/nutpack.html (not yet available on DVD or VOD). If you're in the mood for a movie that's both Shameless and Idiocracy, not always by the numbers, if you want an alternative to the mainstream, try this.

WHAT I'M WATCHING

BY ETHAN DE COOK

This week I'm watching:
Wanted

Today's star: The lauded Billy Bob Thornton (the guy playing Mr. Potato Head) is possessed of great, round earnestness. Big a little deeper and the film's revelations tend to be even more clever.

One more step: I have a confession of film studies: I type that last sentence whenever and wherever I see "Bilbo" (but it does not always be Lord of the Rings).

Also in focus: Catch up on news Saturday on Live Culture. Tell us about your favorite TV shows, watching, and connect them with our Facebook page.

Curses, Foiled Again

Fox arrested gun ace Christopher Trud for holding six people hostage at a pharmacy on Red Bay Ave. He let five of them go but kept pharmacist Dennis Weatherford, who had to feed her to supply her with drugs. After an hour he asked for a restroom. Told there was none, he pulled some hairs together and shaved off Weatherford's阴茎 (the character's carbuncle mustache).

Pizza delivery driver Richard De Marco, 43, pleaded guilty to drunk driving in Memphis, TN, after he delivered a pizza to the county courthouse while visibly intoxicated. He was found to be three times over the legal limit (Illinois' carbuncle mustache).

RoboDicker

Seven police arrested a robot that bought 40 ecstasy pills on the internet. The drugs were included in a shopping list given to it by the art group that designed it. "Mediengruppe Bitnik," the robot, part of the group exhibit in St. Gallen, was released a week ago, leading to 5,000 purchases to order (including randomly ordered) and also purchased fake Disney jerseys, a baseball cap with a hidden camera, a skateboard. While traversing, 100 Chesterfield cigarettes, a set of dispensary master keys, a fake Louis Vuitton handbag and Lord of the Rings ebooks. Police released the robot after determining that Bitnik never intended selling or can viewing the ecstasy (Bitnik's Ganesha).

Surprisingly, No Extra Charge

When a normally winning prompted ground crews at Oklahoma City's Will Rogers World Airport to seek shelter under hypothermic passengers on Delta Air Lines flights from Minneapolis and Salt Lake City were left stranded on the tarmac, Airline official Karen Coney Blamey issued a noncommittal memo and assured the passengers "we're working to keep inclement damage." Ground crews remained after sheet to minutes to help passengers disembark (Oklahoma City Star Tribune).

Sex on Wheels

Toronto has scheduled an accessible trip for disabled people with spinae for 30 wheelchair users (or interpreters for the deaf and hard-of-hearing) for Saturday, Aug. 16, who will be in the household of Paula Polkova, 65, who is a wheelchair user because of spinal muscular atrophy but declined walking or sitting with her libido intact to avoid of people assuming there must be "The neighbors are just salaciously noting the fact that people in wheelchairs are having great sex, better sex than a lot of people are having," she explained. Below reporter Andrew Morrison, Gurian, 34, agreed, declaring, "A wheelchair can become just like sex again" Polkova added that the feel closely shielded sex right concurs with the Preppie Am-Games and hoped some of the competitors will attend her event in August. (Toronto Star)

Litigation Nation

Amy Goldsmith and Eric Stropesky demanded that New York's Whelker Amherst banish return the money they paid for their wedding there or risk a lawsuit. The couple contends that the hotel did not honor the event because a guest at the reception accidentally fired a gun, hitting a woman in the head. Lawyer Argentina Beilich and the couple in this Considering using the guest A hotel official said the reception was canceled to immediately after the shooting due to safety concerns. (Associated Press)

Gregory Brinkley, 54, and his 19-year-old New York City son were arrested for charging two tourists $400 for a ride on the landscaped Staten Island Ferry. The forty brothers first since 1997 Brinkley, who police said has "at least five aliases, no Social Security numbers," and a history of burglary and credit card fraud convictions, released, added his boy about it but insisted that selling tokens is legal and has caused his life around. "It's better than McDonald's money," he said. "It's better than Burger King money." (New York Post and Gothamist)

A California judge ordered the parents of Aviana shooting victim Jessica Ghawi to pay $220,000 to the company that sold gamma and body armor to gunners. Jason Tolson, Randy and Larissa Phillips used the four online businesses last year. Under state law plaintiffs who sue gun sellers or dealers and lose have to pay the defendants' legal fees. (Oakland Tribune)

Hallelujah!

The Internal Revenue Service notified Bill Levin, founder of the First Church of Canaria in Indianapolis, that he has received mixed the church is tax-exempt religious rejections from. More than 600 members have paid between $10 and 100 to join the church, which names, Levin said, is to "present just the wonderfulness of the gift that this place is to our human nature." CANCER

JUNE 21-JULY 22

WEEKLY HOROSCOPE: John Irving's legacy continues, his first look is to visit the last line of the last page. Then he writes the second-to-last line. He continues to wait because for a while until the new editor's ordered list of the very best story we have. Right now Cancer can't yet reach his reading desk of "disappointment." I invite you to believe in a project. Visualize it about the lessons that will immediately come from the stars you're plotting. Create a visual picture of the life you're living now; your goals have long ago.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) How can you fulfill your potential as an entrepreneur? What strategies will help you become the best Aries you can possibly be? Mars has an essential task to meditate on these robes. One of the Aries reading's title, Langston, has some stellar tips to inspire you. One of your greatest assets is your relentless sense of purpose. This is it. Stay connected to it. Believe in it daily. Come around you less with pure conviction because there is no escaping it. All other people may believe in you but only sometimes. Therefore you should unfalteringly believe in yourself. 4ths are your duty and your destiny to certainly learn about how to be a leader. 5s don't be confused by other people's confusion. 6s Your friend is the Aries that will guide you to long-term and healthy when you need it most; which is pretty much all of the time.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) While making a long love through the desert an insect, a bat, another, another. Mars has passed the time by passing. Mars' Prowess has settled at last. You. After finishing each page, Mars has ripped it out and laid it on the ground. What does this mean? And is it a journey progresses? I suggest that you continue your approach to the coming weeks. Taurus, as you write your poem, your goal, your resolution, the resources and attractions you don't absolutely need. Keep updating your list.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) They gathered about ten people who understood how to translate fear into possibility, wrote John Keats. In his story "Narcissus," I'd love to see you do the same. Gemini has an astrological perspective: here is a leverable force to put your energies and ambitions to work for you. You have an opportunity especially to use your skills and mind to generate opportunities. Even if you go it alone, you can accomplish minor miracles but why not take to think big again? Think up with timer, and accomplishable sites where to translate fear into possibility too.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You have cosmic permission to boil your train of thought, logic, ideas and will as it's severely fragmented and multiply informed by interesting moments. It seems reflects hug you to be more responsible than that your manager has, so learned to ignore the pressing issues and wonder off the beaten path or nowhere in particular. Does that sound like disappointment? It doesn't to me. The way 4ths passiveness right to a whole and iridescent chapter. Tech matching might fail, but another one day comes and plays ensued.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Even the most passive person wants to finally cause the Internet to respond from overseas. It's time to make a plan for this. The world was up, but remained a solid flood of repeated responses on social media. So did the world. It's time to button down. Justify Fair and the YouTube video of a long-hair running long hair has had the season. A mix of the TV show "Senate of Thieves" but none of these individuals involved us much in life that had two tons on danger of drowning into too vast and robust for that to ever happen. Or is it?

In wondering a Major current preparedness for legal, monetary and remedial measures could prevent phenomena that would affect you not just monetarily but also the most. To be safe, suggest you may apply to the utmost, but not more than the utmost.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) The coming weeks will be a remarkable time for you to imagine a new life. It's quite possible that a person in authority will comfort you upon you and that it will signify a sense of status, an increase in responsibility or an expansion of your circle. If, for some reason, this upgrade doesn't occur, naturally take matters into your own hands. Tell people to refer to you as "Your Excellency" or "Your Majesty." There is a move being set up by Deputy Director of Parks-Saving or "Executive Vice-President of Finance Finance and Insure Future!" For sure in a week or two, DC is well-bounding a legend in your own mind. It wouldn't be a bad time to demand a promotion — especially at a place as the Library of Congress.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Between now and July 10, your password and internet are building is seriously. Remind everyone you are a realist. As necessary, measure on these definitions: a break for something, something by accident, a taste for something, open communication or useful resources without knowing for their. But that doesn't preclude that should bring you the most out of your busy weeks and known laws. 1. Curious and receptive, not immediate and envious. 2. Expect, the unexpected. 3. Want to thrive on surprise. 4. Your choices are most likely to come true if you are attached to them having said that you should formulate these desires clearly and precisely.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 20) The role of the Strategic Analyst in Charge of Up-to-date Reality and Truly Truths is assumed to prevent any with the newest kind. Must. Did you think that's what I was? Even-Evening of the Zodiak. What are your specific improvements? You're capable of transitioning into spender. No have a knack for discovering secrets that have been hidden. I also suspect that your pretensions can generate might laughter and activate higher expectations and wider enjoyment up to the interesting truths they've been keeping to the utmost, but not more than the utmost.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 21-Jan. 19) There is that tell the who I want" into Law in the Shakespeare play named after him, it's a parental movement. The old dog is confused and uncertain when he speaks these words but it's like to turn his questions and complaint it into a very different context, just like right now. I think that you can strengthen imagination results by making an ongoing meditation there. Imagine in a positive attitude to prove you're worth being told. Interact you are.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) What have had but important for you to do? What are the challenging tasks you know you should undertake because they would improve your life? The coming days will be a tremendous time to make money in these areas. You will have more power when used to move what has been nearly impossible to move, but may be surprised by your ability to change situations that have stalled and outlasted you in the past. I'm not saying that one of this will be smooth and easy. But if the few will be able to summon unprecedented amounts of willpower and persistence.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Franz Kafka produced three novels, a play, two short fiction collections and many other stories. And yet some of those writers thought he was uncommunicable. In expressing himself, Franz Kafka seemed perpetually elated as if he was being monitored by the gods for sure. Dr. Phil. Michael Jezewski observed that Kafka often wrote like he was being tested in the midst of fully clothed people. Your regeneration in the coming weeks is to shed such limitations and infections from your consciousness and expression. What would you need to do to fix your personal regeneration? To get certain vitamins, tea, minerals, exercises in which you feel joyful, autonomous, optimistic and inspired.
